

Matthew L. Carlson, MD, MBA, is a neurotologist who completed his fellowship at Vanderbilt University and his residency in otolaryngology at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, MN. He earned his medical degree from the University of Minnesota and a Bachelor of Science from Bethel University. Recently, he completed an Executive MBA at the Carlson School of Management, University of Minnesota, to enhance his leadership skills in healthcare.

Dr. Carlson currently serves as the Chair of the Division of Otology and Neurotology at the Mayo Clinic and the program director for the neurotology fellowship, where he has a special focus on cochlear implantation and vestibular schwannoma. He is grateful for the support of his colleagues and research team, which has been instrumental in his success. He also thanks Drs David Haynes and George Wanna for their amazing mentorship in fellowship and beyond.

Outside of his professional life, Matt is an avid outdoorsman who enjoys fishing, hiking, and hunting. Most importantly, he is a proud father of four and a devoted husband to his wife, Becky, cherishing family time as a core part of his life.
